High in the loft of Bridgehouse Mill, in the centre of the Worth Valley, is a specialist gift company quietly weaving its creative magic. Trimmed with Love is the result of an impressive textile heritage where quality, skill and craftsmanship lead the way.

loyal support of his wife, Norma. Norma continues her involvement while son Robin Wright leads and expands Wydean Weaving in a global marketplace.

This 21st century business meshes the best of handwoven craft with modern know-how and global sourcing to form a distinctive range of products while at the same time maintaining the unique ability to deliver highly personalised pieces.

Rosie Wright, Robin's daughter and Norma's granddaughter, joined the company in 2014. Rosie, a business graduate from Nottingham Trent University, adds a fresh approach and new skills to the stable.

With three generations on hand and a trifecta of tradition, innovation, and focus, the future looks bright and certainly Trimmed with Love for Wydean Weaving.

Intricately woven bracelets, hand beaded garters, multi faceted trim to embellish beautifully scented candles, napkin rings, key rings and cushions; these are all part of the gifts of distinction and luxury accessories that define Trimmed with Love's collection. The carefully designed range stands out in the multifaceted market for wedding accessories and special occasion gifts. It appeals to a discerning eye and is proudly British.

Rosie, Norma, and Robin Wright from Wydean Weaving in Haworth

Many local people are familiar with Trimmed with Love's parent company, Wydean Weaving, manufacturers of braid and uniform accoutrement, beautiful ribbon, and embroidered work. Only a few weeks ago HRH, Princess Anne visited the factory workshop to commemorate 50 years in Haworth.

It was Oxenhope man David Wright, who established Wydean in Haworth after relocating from Gloucestershire. David shaped the business with the
